

Our ease, or thrifte, our honor & our daye
 Shall roe for this wayne bubbles shadow paye:
 Ends love in this, that my man can be as happy as I can, if he can endure the shorte scorn of a brydegromes play That loving ^{lovetick} curtesie y^e swears
 'Tis not the Bodys marry, but the mynd which hee in her Angelike fynds would swears as iustly y^e hee hears in that dayes rudd hoarse myndes tralye y^e sph Hope not for mynde in roomen ^{the} ^{eyes} Sweetnes & witt, they are but ^{at their best} ^{flawes}

 Valdition

So soe, leave of this last lamenting kiss, wth suches ^w sorowes, & vapors both away Turne thou Ghost y^e waye, & lett me turne this, & lett our sorowes be night ^{out} or happy daye;
 we askt none leave to love, nor will we owe any so cheap a death, as saying, goe; Goe, & if that word haue not quite ^{thee} kild mee ease mee wth death, by bidding mee goe too Or if it haue, lett my word worke on mee & a iust office on a murderer doe, Except it be to late to kill me soe being double dead, going & bidding goe

Fragment

Belieue not him who loue hath left so wise as to haue power his owne tale to tell For Childrens griefs do yeld y^e lowdest cryes & cold desires may be expressed well
In well told love most ofte fallshod lyes but pittie him that only sighs & dyes

All hayle sweete port more full of more strong fyre thin hath or shall enkindle my dull spirit, I loue what nature gaue me ^{thee} but thy merit of witt & arte, I loue not, but admyre; whoe hath before or shall write after ~~this~~ ^{thee} their workes though toughly labored, will be like infancy, or age, to mans firme staye, or early or late twilight, to my daye;
Men say & truly, that they better bee which be enuid then pittid; therefore I because I wish thee best, doe thee enuy:
O wouldst thou by like reason pittie mee.
But care not for mee, I ^{ne} never was in fortunes, nor in natures gifts alas, but by thy grace gott in the Muses schoole,
a monster & a beggar, am a foole.
Oh how I grieue that late borne modesty hath gott such root in all soft waxen harts;
that men may not themselves their owne good pts
extoll, without suspect of surquedry;