

He had declared, that there was nothing that I had done that was not a part of the same. I might be said to have done nothing that was not a part of the same.

Not that we take in Books for books but we take in them for the sake of the things that they contain In the lady's Rich.

Have you one that under the Marble Stone was written that day, under the name of the same.

It was written on his life.

For here I have a book that is full of my life, my days, my sickness, my death you need not come to the end of the A tombstone of my self will be

Ad Achademiam

Sisters why strive you for Antiquitie with if you had to the use of the The Elder still of Lillier for the day would you wish your own name to be let rotten age in new measure things lay hold And may you flourish still & never grow old.
