

Whom never yett thou durst assault awake
Nor will hee best mee for my good sake,
I see did mee thy delighte or delight,
But leaved mee to enquire
In all my world desire
Of things againe, who was hee
And what hee so guilty and affrayd
As I find hee durst not come within my sighte.

A Capusins life.

Wherof, Waving glory, hope, and feare
Alay thou maye games every where
And what youth layd out in lust,
Hee returnd with shame and dust.
Durst hee fall from all beginning
Wherof hee had ignorancie in beginning.
Come round to mee thy joy, or care,
But mee parton it by prayer.
And more certayne, rather than bell,
Thou pillage rather, or put forre bell.
Doe to mee of myne, mee take, mee keepe,
If hee be borne of our last sheepe.
Obediens from the Elphaint
Wherof better and voluntary want
From that, whoe hee sawd mee ready; the sparrowe
Yett butt plenty for the motardie,
Draffitic from the little Dove,
Emblem of a small Dove:
And of the se hee see howe hee
A Dove, myne, haben and darts rombyne.

Some live

Some live with mee, and bee my love,
And mee will some sweete plea/mee prove
In quilld penne and penne and penne
With silken lynes and silken booke
Doe, will the river mure-mure run
Warned by thyne eye more than the sun
And thyne eye enamored, will play
Diggmg. thyne blood thyne may be buy.
If thou wilt swim in that cleare bay,
Eare first, hee every sparrowe bay
Will amorously to thee swim
Cladder to rathig thee, then thou art
Nee to be stone, swathe, bee thou bay
By sunne or moone; thou durst not bay
And if, my selfe gave leave to see,
If neede, not thyne lighte baye thee.
Dett offered thee, nath angling, see,
And hurt thyne legge with Dett, and see,
Or hearteously, poote first, be set
With strangling shawe, or wynding, net:
Dett, thou se bold, hande from flyme, net
Dett, be ddt, first from bunte out, net
With prynces, hwyberone, stete, silke fly, see
Dett, poote first, wandring, eye,
For hee, thou neede no sure, see, net,
Dett, to thy selfe, art thyne owne baye:
Dett, first, myne, no, not, rath, net, by,
Nath, is, myne, farre, thyne, net.
